Kapitel 5: Mistletoe (Inu Yasha)

Morgen kommt der Nikolaus...

und heute bekommt ihr schonmal ein hübsches Drabbel zu Inu Yasha und Kagome Dieses Kapitel ist in englisch verfasst, da es einer lieben Freundin aus den Staaten gewidmet ist.

Ich hoffe euch gefällt es trotzdem

Viel Spaß =)

Mistelzweig (Tag 5; 5. Dezember)

Inu Yasha (Kagome und Inu Yasha)

„Kiss me under the mistletoe...”

A group of girls came along the school floor and every guy they saw had the 'great pleasure' to kiss one of them.

Kagome who is peeved from those girls sighed out loud. "Oh, I wish there were some mistletoe in the medieval Japan", she mumbled.

All the way home there did not spring a little festive mood. "I'm home", Kagome called into the dark house. "Funny, where are they all?"

Kagome walked through every room. "I'm home", she called again. But no answer. Resigned, she went to the fountain. "If there is nobody, perhaps Shippo waits for me."

With these thoughts she jumped into the well. Waiting on the other side - no one. Again, a sigh escaped her.

Then suddenly there was a sound right beside her. "Inu Yasha, you have to sneak up like that?" But it was not Inu Yasha, who has been waiting for her. It was just a stray cat.

"And I thought someone thinks of me" when she was with her bicycle on the road towards the village, she realized that it must have snowed in this world, because the soil was slightly gray.

In front of Kaede's house, she met a familiar face. There, with closed eyes, Inu Yasha leaned against the wall. Cautiously Kagome crept closer. As their faces were only a few centimeters away from each other, Inu Yasha suddenly opened his eyes and said dryly: "That does not work."

At this moment there was a loud bang and the sky darkened. Mistletoe flew everywhere, and remained hanging in the air. Kagome's eyes wandered up and saw a branch.

Inu Yasha followed her gaze. Both looked at each other and the rest is history.

Or for those who want to know it: Here is a picture that shows it^^
